WAUKRAN, Ill., April 9.
Previous to the discovery of the burning steamer off this place this morning, a heavy explosion was heard upon the lake from the direction in which she was first seen, and it is suppossion. When seen she was enveloped in fames and appeared to be animong sable and drifting at the merey of the waters, which were running high. The wind was hidwing a gate from the northesst. The upper works have entirely hurnel, the smoke, stack is gone and the lathoard wheel house is apparently gone also. The full is now drifting towards the shore in the direction of Lake Forest. A sail vessel remained to the vicinity of the burning steamer two hours during the morning and then started towards Chelago. It is reported from Milwankee that there were latiween 30 and 40 passengers on her list.

Though a very young man, he was a very active and eloquent agitator n the O'Connell repeal movement. On the inauguration of the Young Ireland party under Smith O'Brien, he was at once recognized as one lar, not going to necessary expenditures.

It understand, Mesers, Editors, that our citizens of its most talented and patriotic leaders, and when that party was forced to come to a stand are willing to be taxed to any reasonable extent point, Mr. McGee had to fly with others, includ-ing Richard O'Gorman, Meagher and others.— whatever needed and important improvements ing Richard O'Gorman, Meagher and others.-Through the assistance of the Catholic pricate, be managed to escape to France, disguised as a lady, and from thence came to America, and for some time published a journal entitled the Colf. in Bulklo.

He afterwards passed into Canada, where talents and eloquence soon susured him a very prominent position in political and literary ci cles. He was elected Parliament, and was in the Cabinet, holding the office of Minister of Agriculture. In this position his influence was solicited after the Fenian invasion of 1866, in favor of some of the Irish who had been captured. This he declined to give, alleging that the law ought to take its course. From this time, the estrangement between him and his countrymen, which had been growing for some years, became irreconcliable, and in the early part of this year he was expelled from the Society of St. Patrick, of which order ie was long a member. Mr. McGce was one of the most excellent oraors of his time, few men having the power to sway the minds of his hearers which he posed. His death has caused great excitement n Ottawa, and the telegraph informs us that fears are entertained of another Fenian invasion to take place immediately. The assassin escaped, and it is thought that he was engaged by a secre

As an orotor, poet, scholar and historian, Mr. McGee stood very bigh in the estimation of critics, who were opposed to his political views. His History of Ireland will long remain a text book, his brilliant and popular feetures, delivered for the benefit of Mechanics' Institutes, and charitable foundations, were a source of consider able revenue to these societies.

Mr. McGee was probably the most eloquent public speaker in Canada. A man of fine culture, with all the impulsiveness predilar to his race, ready, bold, with a pleasing voice and address, be was a rare exception to the generality of Canadia public men, who, as a rule, are even heavier and more formal than the English. No public man in Canada, probably, had more warm friends or more intense enemies than Mr. McGee. He will have no immediate successor to fill the large place he occupied in the mluds and talk of Cama-

Judge Cartis opened the case for the Presiden yesterday. Mr. Thad. Stevens has commenced he preparation of a speech, and General Logar also desires to have an opportunity to make a few remarks, while Messrs. Boutwell and Bingham are to close the case in opposition to Messre Stanbery and Eyarts.

Mr. Summer appears disposed not to let the Chief Justice off so easy; for he has prepared and published an elaborate argument showing as he has twice done since the trial commences Mr. Sumner concludes as follows:

Mr. Summer concludes as follows:

"We are the Senate; he is the presiding officer; athough, whether in the court room or the

The Chief Justice, it is said, will continue have his own way, and vote as he has done.

As the rule now stands, only two can speak on each side. Atl of the managers, as well as each of the President's coupsel, are auxious to be heard. Possibly the matter will be so arranged as to give one hour to each.

Referring to one feature of the trial the Balti more American says :

more American says:

There is one other feature of the trial worth noting, and that is the different line of conduct pursued by Sunator Wade, of Ohio, and Senator Patterson, of Tennessee. The latter is the President's son-in-taw, an immate of his household, and doubtless discusses with him case day the progress of the trial and the chances of acquital as they may appear through the gossip her picks up on the floor of the Senator, Senator Wade does not vote, but Senator Patterson never joils, as Washington parlamechas it, to "vote for his boarding house." The contrast is as marked as the character of the two men who furnish it.

Directors receive no compensation for their offi-cial services; the duties of both these Boards are responsible and often onerous. And yet, as citizens auxious to contribute to the general welfare of the city, the Councilmen and the School Directors undertake the performance of their reduties, without receiving one cent of pay for all the time and labor, which, during their terms of office, they are required to give. The principle intended to underlie the entire management of the City Government is that economy. The two important official Boards in receiving no pay for their services furnish the first example of this principle. The offer of the Second National Bank to perform the duties of City Treasurer gratuitously, is worthy of all commendation.

But the motion to reconsider the appointments so that the offer of the Second Mational Bank might be considered, whereby five hundred (500) dollars could be saved this year to the city, was lost by a heavy vote in the negative. Now, the taxpayers of Titusville are interested in knowing why this motion was thus summarily killed.
